What you're wearing reflects your innermost desires, whether it's a power-suit screaming I want success, or a Tron suit screaming I want Jeff Bridges! For clothes catering to what each man craves, take Two In the shirt. Specializing in t-shirts showing naughty images of nude/nearly, Seattle-based T.I.T.S. has based its entire operation on the simple but bold premise that everyone wants sex, a deeply more exciting truism than that behind their former incarnation, The Food, Shelter and Love Collection. The new holiday line trots out such uplifting numbers as Carol & Cheryl, who said the ladies are Santa-hatted while tongue-wrestling; Gifted, showing the ultimate xxmas morning, complete with strategically placed ribbons; and twice as enjoyable, sporting a couple of seasonal underwear hotties, perfect as Santa already knows you're a stone-litter pimp. More freshness includes Smoke (martini drinks girl blowing logo'd smoke rings), Umbrella (fortuitously long-haired brunette sucking on a fruit ile) and Flawless, (girl w/ live hued lips and giant matching gemstone), thematically associated because women with alcohol, women with fruit, and women with diamonds all just make sense; also newly available are vampiric True Blood, and Good Greens, which shows a hot, ganja-smoking golfer engaged in a game of putt, putt, give. Future T.I.T.S. plans include collabs with Tera Patrick and local hip-hop crew Dyme Def; Right now, they are also offering $100 gift cards to the winners of their online sexy Halloween costume competition – whoever wins just needs to remember to wash the lacy bits at Light Cycle. Holding a fundraising event or running for us, why not buy this cotton tee shirt. Your little one is upright and takes his first tentative steps. You couldn't be more excited - you finally get to buy the cute pair of miniature Baby Jordans. But does your baby really need them? Well, yes and no. When a baby first starts to toddle - usually between 8 and 18 months - it is not necessary for him or her to wear shoes inside the house. But outside, the sore feet need protection. The trick of finding the right shoe is to make sure it fits. Although a little extra space in the toe is needed, do not try to make footwear purchase last longer by buying shoes a few sizes too large. A novice walker has enough problems without slipping out of his or her shoes. When your child tries on shoes, see the child's answer. If a couple seems to hurt or if they have trouble walking, take them off. Avoid trendy styles, especially those with pointed toes, which can squeeze small toes and limit growth. Also avoid clogs, which look cute but fall off easily. While the best way to make sure you get the right shoes for your baby is to try them, there are times when that's not possible. Maybe you buy baby shoes as a gift and you found the perfect pair, but it's a British or European brand. Or, maybe you found an appointment online you just pass up. For whatever reason, you need a chart to help you figure out which shoe size to buy for that special baby in your life. The average age is an average. If the child you are buying for is great for his/her age, the clothing size column can be a better indicator of what shoe size to buy. European and British baby shoe brands tend to run larger, on average, than American baby shoe brands; a size 18 EU, for example, is more like a 3.5 U.S. Most brands have specific size charts for their shoes; see if you can find one on their website to help you make the best choice. Measuring a baby's foot can be a challenge! Here's a video showing how to get a proper foot measurement of your wiggly little one. UK UK European Average age of children sold under baby or toddler label? 1 0.5 16 newborns to 6 months infant/baby 2 1 17 newborns to 6 months infant/baby 3 2 18 6 to 12 months infant/baby 4 3 19 6 to 12 months infant/baby 5 4 20 12 to 18 months baby/toddler 6 5 22 12 to 18 months baby/toddler 7 6 23 18 to 24 months baby/toddler 8 7 24 18 to 24 months baby/toddler 9 8 25 24 months plus toddler/baby boy 10 9 27 24 months plus toddler/baby boy 11 1 0 28 24 months plus older children 12 11 30 24 months plus older children Do the thumb test: A child's longest toe should be a thumb width (about half an inch) from the tip of the shoe. The back of the shoe should be snug, but comfortable. If a baby heel slides out easily, the shoe is too large; If the shoe squeezes the heel, it is too small. Get a salesperson to measure both of your child's feet. What gears?: Footwear should be porous and flexible. Shoes made entirely of rubber or plastic tend to be stiff and cause excessive sweating. Choose cloth, canvas or leather, which stretches and allows a shoe to bend. Go Boxy: The dimensions of the shoe should approximate the shape of a child's foot, so choose square or oval shapes. Feel the heel: The back of the shoe should be snug, but comfortable. If a baby heel slides out easily, the shoe is too large; If the shoe squeezes the heel, it is too small. It takes two: Get a salesperson to measure both of your child's feet. Most babies have as much as a half-size difference between their feet. Always buy shoes to fit the larger foot. Go high style: For babies between 9 and 18 months, high-top sneakers and soft leather ankle boots will stay on better than low-cut styles. Keep tabs: Toddlers grow their shoes quickly. A new pair may be too small after just three to four months. To ensure a proper fit, do the thumb test a few months. Get in the groove: Moderate grooved rubber soles go a long way towards preventing a wobbly toddler from slipping. Try roughing up the soles of smooth-bottomed shoes with sandpaper for better traction. As many brides (and their bridesmaids) know, the search for The Perfect Dress is not always easy.
